- Age: 56
- Work: Postal clerk
- Family: Married with two adult kids (34 and 32)
- Location: Galatina, Italy

Bio

Annunziata is a 56-year-old postal clerk from Galatina, Italy, a local town close to Porto Badisco. She graduated in the 80s with a Liceo Magistrale diploma and went to work immediately after. She's been working at the same postal office for almost forty years and despite not making much money, she is content with her stable work life. She had two kids – Salvatore, 34, and Lucia, 32 – with her husband, Giuseppe, who's a baker. She's also a grandmother to Elisa, 4. Both her children are university-educated and encourage her to try new experiences and places, by taking her on family trips. She has chronic lower-back pain and carpal tunnel. On a beautiful late September Sunday, they decide to visit Otranto and Porto Badisco, emptier and more enjoyable now that most tourists have left. She's not the adventurous nor the technology-savvy type, but after some persuasion by her children and having read a bit about the history of the cave in the museum, she decides to live the virtual exhibition.

Personality

- Extrovert (80%)
- Feeling (70%)
- Sensing (60%)

- Judging (60%)

Goals

- Learn more about her home region and roots.
- Experience a new technology she is not familiar with, that makes her leave her comfort zone and feel closer to the younger generation (and feel younger herself).
- Have fun with and feel closer to her family;
- Feel engaged and leave more educated than before

Motivation

- Cultural identity
- Curiosity
- Time travel
- Wonder
- Social interaction: if experienced with friends and family, the user can discuss the experience with them and make the family trip better

Frustration

- Low self-esteem: scary, new experience with a new, immersive technology that challenges the sensibility of the user
- Educationally disadvantaged: the user does not have a higher education and finished her studies years before, so she might not remember much or anything about the historical period or she might be bored by the topic
- Complicated technology that needs some explaining before being used
- Physical strain: standing too long or being in a certain position might cause her discomfort
